I can't say who the Presidential candidate will be, but whom-soever the party may nominate will be the next President, unless some folly on their part turns the tide of public sentiment. The part turns the tide of public sentiment. The Democrats are now certainly on top.

"The rulings of Reed and the general conduct of the last House has irreparably damaged the Republican party in almost every section of the country, and their position on the tariff question, with the passage of the McKinley bill, did the whole work for them in the North and Northwest, while the Force bill was their death-knell in the South."

"We will have a majority, I think, of at least sixty in the next House, and I don't think their majority in the Senate will be over eight. I was more surprised at the result of the election in Yirginia than I was at the large Democratic vote cast in the country at large. I was not expecting such a large Tammany victory, although I thought they would win.

TELEGRAMS SENT. "Have you sent any congratulatory tele-

"Oh, yes," replied Mr. Ellyson. "I have sent them to all the Democratic candidates in the State, and my old personal friend, Hon. William W. Wilson, of West Virginia; R. P. Flower, of New York, who is chairman of the New York, who is chairman of the Democratic Congressional Committee. I also sent one to William E. Russell, who has just been elected Governor of Massachusetts. He is a warm personal friend of mine, and I am glad to see him elected. He is the most persevering man I ever saw. This is the third time he has run for Congress. The first time he made the Republican majority drop. The second time it dropped still more, and this time he dropped in. You can readily see how popular he is by being nominated three times by the party. CAUSE OF VICTORY.

"The seating of Langston and the Force "The seating of Langston and the Force bill," replied Mr. Ellyson. "I think these two Republican measures had more to do with our victory than anything else. The tariff, of course, had something to do with it, but not as much as the other measures." With this the reporter bade Mr. Ellyson good-night, and concluded in his own mind that victory was not only the result of the Force bill and the seating of Langston, but that to Mr. Ellyson belongs a great deal of credit for his indefatigable labors during the canvass. Mr. Elyson throughout has done an immense amount of work; far has done an immense amount of work; far more than the average citizen will ever know anything about, and to him belongs the greater amount of credit for the excellent way in which he has marshaled the Democratic forces into line, and made the eagle of victory perch upon the banner of Democracy.

Attachments Sued Out.

In the Circuit Court yesterday afternoon a suit was brought by Charles Charter by counsel, Page & Coates, against the management of the "Faust Up To Date" Company for $10,000. Attachments on the costumes, scenery, and receipts were sued out and served on the management at the Academy last night by Deputy Sheriff Macon. The sheriff stating to the defendant's counsel that no bond had been given, no further steps were taken last night. Charter last week was stage manager of the company, but was, it is sa'd, discharged by the management for alleged incompetency while the company was playing in Norfolk. He brings suit for defamation of character, etc.

KOCH'S DISCOVERY.

The Lancet, referring to the fact that Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, of Philadelphia, claims he discovered the method of curing consumption by inoculation before Professor Koch, says: "How easy a matter it is to claim priority, and how difficult to substantiate the claim is shown by Dixon's claim in support of his contention that he established inoculation in animals for the tubercular bacillus. Dr. Dixon mentions that he had met with success in preventing susceptibility to phthisis by inoculating animals with what he believed to be an unusual torm of turbercular bacillus, and that he succeeded in producing marked morphological change in this bacillus; doing this by subjecting it to different degrees of temperature, moisture pressure, and changes in food stuffs. As, however, Dr. Dixon is unable to say how this immunity was produced, and as he refers it entirely to the chemical products of tubercular bacillus remaining.
